

Introduction to Stainless Steel

1 Day Course

Key Learning Objectives:

- Understand why stainless steel is different from non stainless steel and be familiar with the diverse product range and the market sectors supplied
- Learn about the different types of stainless steel i.e. ferritic, martensitic, austenitic, duplex, PH and how they differ in terms of structure and composition
- Learn about the mechanical and physical properties of each stainless steel type and how this influences end use
- Be familiar with the corrosion mechanisms that can undermine stainless steel performance and the important metrics which define corrosion resistance
- Understand the basic methods of forming, fabricating and joining stainless steel
- know the pros and cons of welding each stainless steel type

Who Should Attend:

This Course:

- Suits designers, specifiers, sales people, buyers. It is also relevant to engineers, managers and technicians responsible for the QA testing of stainless steel products.
- Gives a comprehensive overview of the types of stainless steel available, with emphasis on structure, properties and end uses. An important aim is to provide up-to-date information to help with the selection of the most appropriate grade(s).
- Includes a comprehensive technical manual.
